The beautiful and kind hearted Princess, Snow White, charms every creature in the kingdom except one her jealous stepmother, the Queen. When the Magic mirror proclaimed Snow White the fairest of all, the Queen was very angry. For fear that Snow White's beauty surpassed her own, she ordered one of the hunters to take the girl into the woods and kill her. He took Snow white but set her free because he wasn't strong enough to kill her. Exiled into the dangerous forest by her wicked stepmother, the Princess was rescued by seven Dwarfs who made her part of their household.

To express her gratitude, Snow white made lollipops and offered to all the seven Dwarfs. But they could eat the lollipop only if they fulfil the condition. The condition was that they had to solve a mathematical calculation.

The Dwarfs had to choose from the circle a number each and write inside their lollipop, so that the sum of all the digits in each lollipop is the same as the other lollipops. Each digit can be used only once.

DPSK/EVS HOLIDAY ASSIGNMENT/II/2019-20

Theme: Grandma's Tale

Rahim and His Magical Touch

The most awaited summer vacation had begun. Tanya and Tarun were excited to be with their grandmother, Amma, in her beautiful cottage surrounded by a pond, rows of coconut trees, old-shady banyan trees and colourful bushy flowers. Amma's yummy pickles, afternoon bed time stories and her garden always attracted them to visit her every vacation. Amma welcomed her grandchildren with her tinch of magic. She offered them her garden fresh coconut water in mint flavour as a welcome drink.

During the day most of the times Amma was found either in her cosy kitchen or nurturing her trees, plants and flowers. She was seen talking to them and putting them to sleep at the sunset.

One lazy afternoon when the kids had nothing to do, Amma asked them to help her in sowing some seeds. The kids did not understand the purpose behind sowing seeds. Finding them confused, Amma took them to sit under the old-shady banyan tree and started narrating a story. The story of a seed and his friend, Rahim.

Once upon a time, there was a tiny seed sleeping in the womb of the mother soil. She was quite happy and relaxed inside. One day the mother soil asked her to stop being lazy and come out of her womb to see the beautiful green world outside. She still preferred to sleep inside. Seeing this, the Rain God decided to shower throughout the day. The next morning with the first rays of the bright and shining sun, the sleepy seed sprouted from her mother's womb as a little shoot. The shoot was excited to see her surroundings which was filled with beautiful green colourful plants, river, birds and a vast blue sky with a bright and smiling sun. Thus, she decided to grow as fast as she could and stand tall along with other trees and plants. She started to breathe in the fresh air outside her mother's womb. As the days passed by, with the rays of the sun, kiss of the fresh air and shower of the rain water, the tiny shoot grew into a sapling. The sapling became a tender plant and the plant gradually became a tall and shady tree. She was happy to be the shelter of birds and their birdlings. She offered shade to many tired passers-by. She tried to keep the air clean by absorbing all the dust in her leaves. Soon, she became the hide and seek point for the children living in the nearby village.

Amongst them, there was a boy named Rahim who always used to hide behind this tree allowing no one else to crouch under it. Rahim used to spend most of his time with the tree offering his share of food and water. He loved to take his afternoon nap under its shade. Its branches became his study table. At the sunset, he would always hug its trunk, kiss the soil and leave home to meet the tree the next morning.

One sunny day, the tree heard some loud sound which seemed like thousands of drum beats piercing the ears. All the trees got disturbed and scared by the sound. Soon, they got to know that group of woodcutters are on the spree of cutting down all the trees near the river. Rahim could see all the trees falling apart in front of him. The tree being upset to lose all her tree friends, waited for her turn to get slaughtered by the woodcutter. It was the last tree at the bank of the river to get struck by the woodcutter. Rahim in his usual way hugged his favourite tree as tight as he could. The woodcutter came to run his axe over the tree. It could not stop Rahim to hug his tree. The woodcutter was amazed to see the courage of the tiny boy. He was asked to leave the tree and let the axe do its work. Rahim denied and chose to show the woodcutter the condition of the homeless birds who had sheltered on those trees which got struck by him, the passers-by who could no more rest under the shady trees, the village children who stopped playing after losing their favourite hide-outs and the air which was no longer clean as it had all the dirt gathered from the surroundings. Soon, the woodcutter realised that he and his fellow woodcutters have destroyed the beauty of the nature causing trouble to so many other creatures who were dependent on those trees. The woodcutter thus, decided to leave Rahim's tree rooted to the soil and gathered all the children to sow some seeds nearby the lucky tree.

After listening to the story Tanya and Tarun understood the importance of sowing seeds. Since then, every afternoon of their vacation, they helped Amma to water the sown seeds, and nurtured them to grow into future healthy trees.

Question Time:

The Lion That Sprang To Life

In a village there lived four friends who were all brahmins. Of them, three were very gifted and had successfully learnt the holy scriptures while the fourth one was not. One day, the friends decided to go to the king's court and show their skills and impress him. Although reluctant, the three brahmins agreed to take their dimwitted friend with them. As they passed through the forest, they saw the carcass of a lion. Boastful of their skills, the three learned brahmins challenge one another and decided to bring the lion back to life with each of their skills. The fourth friend pointed out that it can be a dangerous idea. They brushed his opinion aside anyway. Scared of what was about to happen, the fourth friend quickly climbed a tree. As soon as the lion sprang back to life, it killed all the three brahmins and ate them.
